

Mr. Salman Zaheer,
Sector Manager, World Bank

Salman Zaheer is the World Bank sector manager for its South Asia energy program covering Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. Over the last 15 years with the World Bank, he has provided investment and advisory services to support energy sector reform and development efforts in Eastern Europe (Bulgaria), the former Soviet Union (Armenia, Belarus, Georgia, Lithuania, Ukraine), Ethiopia, India, Bangladesh and other countries of South Asia. While Mr. Zaheer's main focus within the World Bank has been on the energy sector (power, oil & gas), he has also worked on improving urban water supply services in India (as part of the Delhi-based Water & Sanitation Program from 2001 to 2004). Prior to joining the World Bank, Mr. Zaheer worked in the chemical and petrochemical industry for 12 years - in the USA and internationally in the areas of business development, manufacturing, research, and technical services. Mr. Zaheer has a Bachelor of Science degree from the Delhi University and graduate degrees from the USA in Business Administration and in Economics/International Relations.
